Summer over... everyone settling down to nine months of routine—BACK-TO-SCHOOL. Schedules made up by computer for first time... long lines at guidance counselor's door... schedules finally in order. New class offered for boys... family living. Dress code revised to fit socially accepted styles for the school year. Club meetings... athletic practice... meeting in rec room for latest gossip. Painting posters... making signs for lockers... boosting ego of players... intensifying school spirit. Seniors counting days left... a new sign each day... sophomores full of excitement... juniors waiting for next year... seniors anticipating future... year will end too soon for some... but not soon enough for others.

Move in, drop back, forehand, backhand . . . easy now, place that next shot on his weak side, perfect set up, here it comes—SMASH! That fuzzy, hollow sphere and a thick badminton racket are the tools of the trade. These coupled with the expert knowledge of their use produce the champ . . . 4 1/2 hours a day under the blistering summer sun. Chalk talks, new plays, different offensive and defensive maneuvers compose the majority of late PRACTICE sessions. Tackle the dummy, push that sled. Harder, harder! Run laps, do calisthenics, hit that line, hold onto that ball. Coaches worry; managers rush, pick up odds and ends. Players valiantly struggle through another day's grueling practice. Last minute orders are given; relief is only minutes away. Sweat, exhaustion and dirty practice jerseys follow ominous clicking of spikes into the "Barn". Relieved sighs of the day's training are drowned out by the splattering of showers against the hard cement floor, and throughout the vacant building is heard the closing of lockers as the Bulldogs of CPHS call it a day.

First game, first victory. The Bulldogs of CPHS were on their way. To what? The next several encounters proved disastrous, as the GRIDDERS fell victim to the remainder of their opponents, with the exception of Lake Central which resulted in a scoreless tie. Changes told the story, and at one time, the gridders slumped into a 16 quarter scoreless streak. Strong defense prevailed as the Bulldogs often held their opponents to a limited number of points, failing, however, to capitalize on numerous errors by the opposition. As the dust settled, the Hub team had finished in 5th Place in the Calumet Conference posting a 1—7—1 record and compiling a season total of 24 points. Summing up the '68 season, it might be said that, "They came, saw, and were conquered".

Calumet Conference co-champions, sectional victors ... best BASKETBALL record in school history, rebound record, gym scoring record. All seems very glamorous on the outside, but consider the weeks of preparation ... every night after school, Saturday mornings, last minute instructions, different strategies for different teams, half-time locker room talks ... the running, drilling, free throw practicing, keeping in peak condition ... the strain, effort and desire to perform successfully. The roar of the crowd after an important basket, or the disappointment after missing that shot tells the player that the whole world is watching. Victory is the goal of this concentrated effort, and according to the 1968-69 Varsity Basketball team, victory was present always and effort evident.

Running, vaulting, jumping . . . all are done in the sport of TRACK. First, what to do . . . the shot put? . . . muscles, strength, and timing . . . the 12 pound boulder is heaved at distances up to 50 feet! The hurdles? . . . speed . . . co-ordination . . . stability . . . and bruised knees. How about the long jump? . . . easy enough . . . run, and at the right time leap . . . as far as those muscles can possibly throw . . . all must be split second timed and executed in perfect form. Try the high jump . . . measure off an exact distance . . . run up to the bar . . . jump over . . . effort, strain, and co-ordination. Set sights on higher places . . . the pole vault employs all of the previous qualities . . . an exact amount of speed is needed to clear the 11-foot mark. Last but not least . . . dashes, relays, and distance running . . . quite a sport.

The long green fairways . . . sand traps . . . and despised roughs . . . GOLF. Start off the fresh spring afternoon . . . fastening those size 14's securely . . . step up, take a few practice swings to loosen up. Now starts the test . . . eighteen grueling holes . . . pressure on every single move . . . tee up . . . a few more practice swings . . . and SMACK! The solid, white object whizzes down the length of the fairway . . . curving slightly with the wind . . . good start . . . but the team must keep it up . . . as well as obtaining support from team members. What next? . . . 5 or 7 iron . . . let's try 7 . . . adjust stance . . . straighten that arm . . . on the green! Next reach for the putter . . . eyes glued on that ball and hole. The phrase—"practice makes perfect" seems all important now . . . easy . . . aim . . . stroke it—and . . . BIRDIE.

English

With great imaginations, students got down to the brain-racking job of writing compositions in English classes. Minds pondered, pencils scratched away, and interesting thoughts found their way onto paper. Literature books managed to inch their way open to Milton, Chaucer, and Wordsworth. Shakespeare and other famous poets were also freed from the annals of literature and entered the minds of inquisitive students.

The Song of Roland, The Dialogues of Plato, and Faust were just a few of the epics read in world literature classes in their second year at CPHS. Students were taught the philosophy of great poets and the concepts of the founding of European countries.

Across the hall, grammar students were intent on identifying infinitives or picking out participles.

Rules concerning the use of commas, colons, and dashes still provoked seniors in addition to underclassmen.

These principles were put into operation when bibliographies and footnotes confronted those who tackled term papers at the end of the year.

Foreign Language

Foreign language courses offered chances for students to become proficient in the language of their choice. Speaking the language as well as learning grammar was the new approach taught to beginning Latin students. Advanced students read the works of Cicero, while the Latin Banquet and a trip to see the movie "Ben Hur" highlighted the year for all.

Beginning French students presented oral dialogues, while advanced classes studied the geography and economy of France. Classes often had the opportunity to sing or learn a poem.

In all levels of Spanish, oral work was stressed. Dialogues and basic pattern drills demanded a complete understanding of the language from beginning students. Advanced students worked to perfect their skills while they expanded their knowledge by studying the literature, geography, history and art of Spain.

Theories, postulates and right triangles confronted inquisitive sophomores in geometry. Formulas, circles and special angles had to be fully understood. Puzzled looks, raised hands, and students diligently laboring over a proof of theorem constituted the common classroom scene. The more meticulous study of advanced algebra proved to be the application of previously learned knowledge. Binomials and quadratics posed problems for the third year student who was kept constantly busy with pop quizzes, the famous element of surprise. Seniors were faced with the last level of high school math, tackling the many challenges of analytical geometry, trigonometry, and advanced studies of sequences and series in senior math. And if one listens carefully, chances are you would have been able to hear "Pythagorean what?" echoing somewhere down the hall.

Science

Dissecting frogs, worms, and crayfish proved challenging for sophomore biology classes. Students became acquainted with correct lab techniques for using microscopes and developing bacteria cultures. Numerous films dealing with everything from the role of DNA in genetics to Darwin's theory of evolution were shown throughout the year. Elements, compounds, and mixtures were terms used by chemistry students in performing and writing up experiments. Instructions on weighing solids and computing metric measurements filled the young chemists' thoughts. Members of physics classes spent most of their time working on various problems and performing lab work. Students dealt with power, light, sound, and electricity.

Social Sciences

Social studies classes put theory into practice by learning to budget their money and play the stock market. Economics classes, along with history classes, attended the Legislature in Indianapolis and toured political offices. Seniors focused their studies on human behavior and religions throughout the world in Sociology and Psychology. One field studied in depth by the seniors was conditioned reflexes.

World Geography classes studied varying climates, countries and land surfaces of the world. At the completion of the course the foreign exchange student, Warner ten Kate, showed films and lectured about the Netherlands.

Music

Many hours of practice and all around hard work contributed to the success of the Crown Point Band in marching and concert performances.

In the summer of 1968, the Bulldogs received second place in the National Cherry Festival and went on to win top honors in the Chicagoland Music Festival. The symphonic band performed in the Fall and Christmas concerts, in addition to participating in the NISBOVA State Concert Band Contest. The stage band competed in a number of contests and performed in the Guest Artist concert with Clark Terry.

For the first time a Music Theory class was offered. Students studied the basic theories of music in addition to composing their own arrangements and learning to harmonize a melody. Another music class, Folk Singing, offered an unconventional approach to music by allowing students to discuss contemporary music informally.

CPHS hosted a number of choral groups. A Cappella joined with the band in presenting the Fall and Christmas concerts and also sponsored the Spring Concert. Swing Choir and Madrigals, both consisting of A Cappella members, added variation to performances.

Art, Business

Mastering speed as well as accuracy was a goal for students in typing classes. Manuscripts, term papers, and typing designs for Christmas were only part of the year's accomplishments.

Keeping a systematic record of business transactions was taught in bookkeeping classes. Many machines for every dealing were also studied.

Creative talent went into the art of painting. "What is still life painting?" and "How do you put up an easel?" were the satisfactorily answered questions of puzzled students at the beginning of the year.

Painting and drawing, basket weaving, pottery making and learning art appreciation were undertaken, while the distinction between the different painting styles of famous artists was also studied. The art classes provided creative drawings in display showcases throughout the school, and many students gained recognition in area art shows and exhibitions.

Ag, Driver Education

"Buckle that seat belt, lock those doors, and adjust that rear-view mirror" were the first words the beginning driver heard. Many hours were spent with the beginner to acquaint him with the mechanical monster. For the first time in CPHS driver education history, a truck was added to driving experiences in addition to the regular passenger cars used by the department.

Agriculture was one of the many vocational classes offered. Through active participation, students learned about parliamentary procedure for meetings, cooperative buying and selling, livestock selection, crop and land management, conservation, livestock and crop production, and other activities related to agriculture.

Home Ec, Shop

Refinishing furniture and studying styles of furniture was a main interest of housing classes in addition to traveling to Chicago to tour the Merchandise Mart and Marina Towers.

A style show in May provided the sewing classes with an opportunity to show their outfits made during the year in class and as home projects.

Modern living, in co-operation with the girls' family living class, was opened to boys this year.

Great concentration and precision were involved in drafting. Many of the students enrolled in industrial arts were offered an opportunity to explore the many facets of industry.

Physical Education

Backward rolls, roundoffs, and head stands were familiar terms to Physical Education students.

Among the many phases of the program were track, basketball, gymnastics, tennis, and dancing.

Girls found gymnastics to be trying and challenging. The balance beam, trampoline, and uneven bars called for great coordination.

Dancing was required of both boys and girls. Rhythm and exact timing were necessary throughout the dances. After students finished two years of P.E., juniors and seniors were eligible to participate as student instructors.

Qualified students were awarded the President's Physical Fitness Award.

Health classes were also conducted which enabled the students to study the functions of the body.

Administration

Helping students to arrange schedules and solve problems were the duties of the guidance counselors. Also located in the main office were the secretaries. Mrs. Vivian Spencer acted as the school bookkeeper and treasurer, while Mrs. Marie Olson served as executive secretary and records clerk. Maintaining discipline was only one of the jobs of the administration. Mr. Roger Childress had the overall responsibility for the entire school program, and Mr. Georgas sponsored Student Council, handled locker problems and directed summer school. Preparation of the school budget and employment of staff members were taken care of by Mr. Robert Brannock and his administrative assistant, Mr. Ray Rogers.

Special Staff

Special staffs are required to help run CPHS smoothly and efficiently. Working directly with the students was the nurse administering first aid in case of sudden illness or accident, and the speech and hearing therapist correcting defects in students' speech. Daily routines included managing the buying and selling of books and supplies in the bookstore, keeping the library quiet in addition to signing out books, and supplying audio-visual equipment to aid the teachers. The attendance directors called home when pupils were sick, and took charge of preparing absent and tardy slips. Other staffs worked for the students by keeping the school and its grounds in top shape and serving daily lunches during noon hours.

Mrs. Rita McFadden, nurse.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the following principles: older people should be able to live independently in their own homes; older people should be able to participate in the community; and older people should be able to access the services they need.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives for the future of older people's services. These include: to improve the quality of life of older people; to reduce the number of older people who are in care homes; to improve the access of older people to health and social care services; and to improve the training and development of staff who work with older people.

The strategy is a key document for the development of older people's services in the UK. It sets out a clear vision for the future of older people's services, and provides a framework for the development of policies and practices that will help to achieve this vision. Constant chatter, busy hands . . . helping, sometimes hindering, the progress of EXCALIBUR . . . capturing memories of '69. Schedule the photographer . . . arrange ad shots . . . action and activities pix. Design a layout, draw it on 3-R. Finding precise words, the perfect picture, the time needed to do a good job. Creative copy, cutlines, cropping . . . type in triplicate . . . exuberance over a spread completed. Copy-read, then check . . . send it in—get it back . . . proof read and mail again. Always a deadline to meet . . . always work to complete. Empty coke bottles, candy wrappers, left-over pictures . . . messy layouts, scratch copies, empty envelopes . . . day's work ends . . . but must return and start again.

To the STAFF—the year has gone by too fast . . . the last picture has been cropped . . . last layout drawn . . . and the last copy turned in. Even though we played around a lot . . . sometimes too much . . . we finished. Miss K seemed to yell a lot . . . but we needed it . . . did our best . . . and proved that we could make a yearbook. Throwing away thirty finished pages . . . starting over . . . changing from traditional to contemporary style . . . two part book . . . summer delivery . . . a new challenge. Visit from American Yearbook representative twice a month . . . rushing to meet a deadline . . . running late . . . checking proofs . . . last deadline finished . . . book finished. You have done a great job . . . Thank you . . . BECKY.
